ATEC Commander Maj. Gen. Genaro J. Dellarocco presided over the ceremony, passing the guidon from Outgoing Commander Col. Jeffrey P. Holt, who is retiring, to Graham.

Holt thanked Dellarocco for his support and credited his division chiefs with teaching him "the business." He said the organization was one solely focused on taking care of Soldiers and ensuring that everything that went downrange met the standards.

He expressed his thanks to the more than 2,000 men and women who serve ATC and he said he would remember his tour at APG as one filled with challenge, triumph and stories of courage.

Notably, he recalled the May 2009 tank accident that took the lives of two ATC workers while critically injuring the lone survivor. He then acknowledged the presence of the two widows in attendance.

Holt said the collective ATC team sets the standard for the world in testing.

This is the first in a four-part series on AAFES services at APG.

The Main Exchange, commonly called the PX, is part of Army and Air Force Exchange Service, which offers a number of benefits including tax-free shopping, price matching, online shopping and on-post convenience.

Due to its tax free status, AAFES follows specific laws as to who can shop at their facilities. According to Army Regulation 215-8, active duty service members, Reservists, retirees, 100 percent disabled veterans and their immediate eligible Family members can shop in the Main Exchange with a valid ID card.

STREET TALK

What do you enjoy about the commissary?

Prices are always lower. It is an up-to-date commissary. I would like to see a better variety of meat in the meat department – better cuts of meat. I would also like to see the commissary opened on a Monday, even if the hours are shorter. When it is closed on a Monday it forces us to go off post.

Master Sgt. Jelani Edwards
Senior Military Instructor, Johns Hopkins University

The prices on some things are better than on the outside. Meats and ice cream are better priced [here at the commissary]. There could be more competitive pricing on meat [and] more coupon savings. You have to buy two items to get $.50 off. At my last post, they had coupons for clearance items so that made for huge savings.

Jeanette Bittner
Military Spouse

The commissary is less expensive than other stores and very convenient. I hope to see a wider variety of products when the renovations are finished so I don't have to go [off post]. Service is very good. I got to know people that work here and I feel comfortable as I have been shopping here 11 years.

Colleen Newing

[The] friendly atmosphere – from store manager right down to associates who want to help. Employees are always willing to help find what customers need. I've been here since 2005 and seen many great improvements. In the commissary everyone is working, no-one is standing around. The freezer aisles are wider and it is easier to find things.

Money app puts finances in hand

By LISA DANIEL
Family Matters Blog

Financial planners often talk about “being smart” with your finances – where, when and how to save, spend, and invest your money and how to manage your credit.

The ins and outs of getting and staying in good financial shape can feel like a full-time job. From buying a house to researching tax breaks to asking about lower interest rates on credit cards or auto insurance, getting smart about finances takes effort.

That endeavor can be made easier, however, with a free website and app created especially for military members by the Better Business Bureau and McGraw Hill Companies. The consumer advocacy group's military division teamed up with the global financial information company to create military-andmoney.com and its smartphone app, which is available for the iPhone and iPad. An Android version will be available soon, Brenda Linnington, director of the BBB Military Line, told me.

Linnington, wife of Army Gen. Mike Linnington, who commands the Military District of Washington, creates curriculum for the Military Line's personal finance workshops, which are given at military bases around the country as part of the Defense Department and services' financial readiness outreach. BBB's Military Line also is a partner in the Kiplinger/BBB Financial Field Manual.

Linnington replaced Holly Petraeus last year as MilitaryLine's director when Petraeus was appointed to head

“The great thing about the app is it's very user-friendly, and it puts that person's financial situation in the palm of their hands.”

Brenda Linnington - Director BBB Military Line

the military division of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. Both have worked to ease personal finance for service members and their families.

“We don't want it be laborious kind of thing,” Linnington said of the website and app. “They can just plug in their numbers, so they have their personal financial situation in palm of their hands.”

The digital aids came about after the bureau and McGraw Hill separately pledged to help “Joining Forces,” the campaign First Lady Michelle Obama and Second Lady Jill Biden created last year to support military families, Linnington said. The campaign fostered the partnership, merging the bureau's military financial acumen with McGraw Hill's global financial reach.

The web site and app provide “basic training” in personal finance with video instructions on budgeting and managing credit. They also offer an “action center” with a calculator for entering your own financial information to help with building savings – you can set a reminder for regular installments – and reducing debt.

“The great thing about the app is it's very user-friendly, and it puts that person's financial situation in the palm of their hands,” Linnington said “They can have it with them wherever they go.”

The website and app can help families through the financial shift of deployments and how to ease the burden when combat and hazard pay go away, she noted.

“That reunion period, as wonderful as it is, especially during the honeymoon period, also is full of a lot of stressors,” she said. “Add in the changes to your financial situation – now you have less income, your children are getting older, and becoming more expensive – that can cause more stress on an already stressful situation.”

The website and app are tailored to enlisted members at the E6 level and below, Linnington said, because that is who the bureau found needs it most. Most complaints of financial problems from service members come from the E5 and E6 level, she said. Unlike junior service members, they – most in their mid-20s – are beginning to develop credit and make enough money to pay off debt and save. And they are starting families.

“They have more money than they had before, but they also have more expenses and they're getting into larger purchases,” she said.

HEALTH

Sports injuries in the Army: Don't get sidelined

By TIM BUSHMAN; PHILLIP GARRETT; KEITH HAURET; TYSON GRIER; BRUCE JONES

U.S. Army Public Health Command

Injuries are the biggest health problem in the United States Army and are the leading cause of non-battle injuries and medical evacuations. About 60 percent of Soldiers are injured each year, resulting in a little over one million medical visits annually due to musculoskeletal injuries. Roughly half of the Soldiers experiencing an injury were injured due to participation in sports, exercise and recreational activities.

As an indicator of the impact of these injuries on Soldiers and unit readiness, 72 percent of Soldiers with an injury had two or more days of limited duty, and nearly 40 percent had 15 or more days of limited duty.

Running alone causes about 50 percent of all sports and activity-related injuries. A review of non-running related sports injuries demonstrates the most common ones result from basketball (15 percent), weight training (13 percent), football (10 percent), martial arts (9 percent), and softball/baseball (3 percent). The body region most frequently injured in sports and recreational activities is the lower extremity, with the knee making up almost a quarter of all injuries. The ankle follows with (18 percent), back (12 percent), foot (10 percent) and shoulder (9 percent).

The most common type of sports injury is sprained joint, with ankle sprains being the most frequent. Strained muscles, particularly in the back, are the second most common injury followed by tendonitis or bursitis of the knee, and dislocation of the shoulder. Although fractures and concussions make up only 10 percent and 1 percent of sports injuries, respectively, they tend to require more days of limited duty and longer rehabilitation than other injuries.

Sports medicine literature offers only a few scientifically proven, evidence-based approaches to prevent injuries from sports, exercise and recreation. Some prevention strategies that can be recommended on the basis of scientific evidence include avoidance of overtraining, wearing mouth guards and semi-rigid ankle braces during high-risk activities, wearing synthetic-blend socks to prevent blisters, and wearing helmets for bicycling, skiing, football, lacrosse and Army combatives. The use of breakaway bases for softball and baseball has been shown to reduce the risk of ankle injury by 98 percent. Other suggested strategies, though not yet proven to be effective, include banning of sliding in baseball or softball, balance training, and focusing on dynamic warm-up exercises instead of stationary stretching.

When Soldiers suffer serious injuries such as concussions, fractures or dislocated joints, they should seek medical treatment and inform unit leadership. Other injuries such as sprains, strains, abrasions, or bruises can be treated with rest, ice, compression and elevation (R.I.C.E.). You must rest to give the injury time to heal (this could take several days or weeks depending on the severity of the injury). Use ice (20 minutes on, 20 minutes off for four to six hours) to reduce swelling of the affected area and decrease the pain. Compression bandages will help stabilize the joint, and elevating the affected area will help reduce swelling. If pain and swelling persists, seek medical treatment.

Sports- and activity-related injuries are a major contributor to the Army injury problem. Implementing the above recommendations and suggested strategies should reduce your risk of being injured and will allow a quicker recovery. Keep in mind that the best option is to prevent injuries before they occur. Apply what you know and use common sense so you don't get sidelined by a sports injury.

DEOMI conducts SEPM course at APG

By YVONNE JOHNSON
APG News

The Equal Employment Opportunity office of the U.S. Army Communications-Electronics Command hosted a Special Emphasis Program Managers (SEPM) Course for 23 students from federal agencies around the country last month.

The Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute (DEOMI) program consisted of a week-long course that addressed topics such as aspects of race and ethnicity; special emphasis programs for women, Hispanics and persons with disabilities; and the role of the SEPM in implementing and executing effective special emphasis programs and ethnic observances under the EEO program.

CECOM EEO Director Neslie Etheridge hosted the event. He said 23 employees from various government agencies attended the course, which is either taught non-residential or residential at DEOMI headquarters at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla.

Attendees included managers from the Department of Health and Human Services, the Army Materiel Command, Scott Air Force Base, Ill.; the U.S. Army Cyber Command, Fort Hood, Texas; and the Maryland National Guard. Team APG organizations included CECOM, APG Garrison, RDECOM, and PEOIEW&S.

"We had a great mixture of students," Etheridge said, adding that while hosting such an event was "logistically intense," it was better to allow DEOMI instructors "to come to us."

"My intent was to get more bang for my buck," he said. "It was just as easy to bring the other Special Emphasis managers here for training with our people. We wanted to do this as a team concept," he added, noting that CECOM and installation commander Maj. Gen. Robert Ferrell has made it clear he wants a program that sets the standards.

"We're all Army or Department of Defense, with the same goal: a workplace free of discrimination, and we need advocates out there training managers and the workforce," Etheridge said. "Now, we've got 23 more managers out there, and they know the laws regarding special emphasis and understanding the concept of cross-cultural education."

Etheridge said a college intern from the CECOM EEO office was also able to attend the course. Timothy J. Smith, a student from York College in Pennsylvania was able to sit in due to a last-minute cancellation. Smith has worked in the CECOM EEO office the past two summers. A communications major, Smith said he has learned a lot from EEO but never more than he did during the week-long session.

"At first I was overwhelmed at the sight of the reading materials but as the week progressed I became more comfortable," he said.

He explained how the class focused on discrimination based on race and physical disabilities and concluded with team briefings.

"There were students from Texas, Kentucky, Florida and Missouri," he said. "It was cool meeting people from across the U.S."

A Workforce Recruitment Program referee with cerebral palsy, Smith was able to share with his fellow students how he had been discriminated against. He said at one point he got emotional and had to leave the room but was praised by the DEOMI facilitators for sharing his story.

"I think a lot of managers would benefit greatly from this course," he said. "They can learn how to make the workplace worker-friendly for all workers."

Smith said he enjoys working in the office and would like to stay with the federal government.

"I wouldn't mind staying with EEO but I'd like to learn other areas too," he said. "I'm just so glad I came here."

The Workforce Recruitment Program for College Students with Disabilities is a recruitment and referral program that connects federal and private sector employees nationwide with highly motivated college students and recent graduates with disabilities who are eager to prove their abilities in the workplace through summer or permanent jobs. The U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Disability Employment Policy (ODEP) and the U.S. Department of Defense's Office of Diversity Management & Equal Opportunity (ODMEO) manage the program.

www.deomi.org

The DEOMI mission is to assist its customers in enhancing their mission readiness and capabilities by promoting human dignity through education in equity, diversity, and cultural competency, as well as, research and worldwide consultation.

The Special Emphasis Program Managers (SEPM) Course is designed to develop a base of knowledge and skills that allow graduates to serve as effective collateral-duty and full-time Special Emphasis Program Managers.

The course develops a base of knowledge and skills that allow graduates to serve as effective collateral-duty SEPMs regarding the employment of Federal Women, Blacks, Hispanics, Native Hawaiian or other Pacific Islanders, Asians, American Indian/Alaskan Natives, and People with Disabilities Programs). Training introduces the causes and effects of discrimination, and concentrates on the roles and responsibilities of SEPMs.

Exercise confirms U.S. homeland defense capability

By C. TODD LOPEZ
Army News Service

Army leaders say the performance of participants in the recently concluded Vibrant Response 13 exercise has demonstrated that the U.S. military is ready to handle a major catastrophe, such as a nuclear explosion, on the homeland.

"I think what we really demonstrated was a pact that we've made with the American people that should something like this occur in our nation, that we have the Department of Defense capability with trained and ready response forces," said Maj. Gen. Walter L. Davis, deputy commander, U.S. Army North.

About 9,000 service members participated in Vibrant Response from July 26 to Aug. 13. It was held on 11 training areas across 5,000 square miles in southern Indiana and northern Kentucky. The purpose of the exercise was to confirm the capabilities of various elements of the DOD's chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear, known as CBRN, response enterprise.

During the exercise, troops reacted to the simulated detonation of a 10-kiloton nuclear detonation in a major Midwestern city. Participants came from all four services, both the active and reserve components, and represented about 25 U.S. states and territories.

"It's really kind of heartwarming and gratifying to see the people who are training, as an example, in search and rescue or search and recovery operations, putting on personal protective equipment and digging through rubble, and staying in it for minutes, hours, long periods of time to rescue somebody," said Davis, who answered questions about the exercise as part of an Aug. 15 bloggers round table.

Although the exercise officially concluded, evaluation and further testing will continue through at least October.

Vibrant Response confirms the capability of the Defense CBRN Response

Force as well as the Command and Control CBRN Consequence Response Elements B- team, by evaluating performance in a realistic setting. The C2CRE-B team, comprised of about 1,500 personnel, begins their mission to support the DOD's CBRN response capability in the United States on Oct. 1. At that time, the C2CRE-A team, who also participated in Vibrant Response, will conclude their mission in that same role.

Davis said that Vibrant Response 13 served as both validation for C2CRE-B as they prepare to take on their mission, and as well as sustainment training for C2CRE-A. That type of training will continue, Davis said, in order to maintain America's CBRNE response capability.

"We will have to continue encouraging the sustainment training," Davis said. "These are forces that don't have a lot of training days during the year. And so we will really have to continue to emphasize, maximizing as we go through the course of next year, the collective training for those units as they return back to their installations."

Preparations have already begun for next year's Vibrant Response exercise, and Davis said lessons learned from this year's exercise, and from those in past years, will be applied to the next exercise.

"We've learned a lot of lessons over three or four years of conducting this," he said. "And so each time we try to improve it in terms of what we need to do to improve the entire enterprise and its preparedness to respond."

Meet Tammy Spickler, commissary store director. Spickler oversees all store operations and manages employees.

Tammy Spickler
 Commissary Store Director

Spickler said that the main advantage of the commissary is savings, and convenience.

"Customers can save up to 25 to 30 percent on their overall grocery bill," she said. In addition to groceries sold at competitive prices, customers can also purchase special deli, cookie and fruit platters with two days notice.

"This is a great service for those who are planning a party," Spickler said.

Periodically the commissary will have case lot sales, where customers can buy items in bulk. The next case lot sale will take place Sept. 21 and 22.

Currently Spickler is overseeing a $7.5 million renovation project, to be completed in March. New equipment, like a chill box, freezers and meat cases, have already been added to the commissary and eventually the register area will be expanded to make the lanes more handicap accessible. A five percent surcharge from all sales is used to cover renovation and other commissary operating costs.

Spickler added that commissary employees appreciate feedback. Customers are encouraged to request items they would like to see on shelves.

"We will request the item if DeCA (Defense Commissary Agency) has it in their files," Spickler said.

Spickler, who is the spouse of a retired service member, said that she enjoys interacting with customers who are part of the military community.

"I have a vested interest in this store, it is the only place I shop," she said.

Commissary authorized patrons include active duty, Guard and Reserve members, military retirees, Medal of Honor recipients, 100 percent disabled veterans, and their authorized Family members. Visit www.commissaries.com for more information.

The commissary is located in building 3400 on Aberdeen Boulevard and Springfield Street. Customers can provide feedback by contacting Spickler or the store administrator, Diane Mann, at 410-278-3101. Customers can also e-mail Spickler at tammy.spickler@deca.mil. Store hours are Tuesday 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Wednesday-Friday 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday-Friday the store offers early bird hours, during which customers can purchase 20 or fewer items. The commissary is closed on Monday.

Be prepared to survive any emergency

By YVONNE JOHNSON
APG News

September is National Preparedness Month. Be it tornadoes, hurricanes, lightning or floods, the impacts of nature's violent storms should never be underestimated.

It could happen here. Despite modern technology and state-of-the-art forecasting tools, man is unable to contain Mother Nature. The only real defense is to be prepared.

For those who live and work on Aberdeen Proving Ground, the first line of defense starts with the meteorological specialists of the ATEC - Aberdeen Test Center Atmospheric Effects, Measurements and Modeling Team.

Along with providing forecast discussions and video monitoring of ATC test sites, the team is responsible for providing the garrison commander with information needed to make installation closure or delay decisions, to advise and/or warn of imminent weather hazards or threats, and to support Emergency Operations Center personnel with weather-related issues and information.

The Emergency Management Division, located in Bldg. 314, is the brain center where all incidents, emergencies or sensitive situations are handled.

From there, information is received, disseminated and analyzed, and orders are dispatched and put into motion. It is there that decisions are made regarding the closing, delay or evacuation of the installation.

The staff includes Richard "Rick" Deoliveira, chief of Plans and Management; Pedro Rodriguez, CBRNE officer/emergency management; Essie Bennett, surety officer; and Michelle Swift, acting secretary to EOC Director Clint Zaengle.

Particularly in the summer, weather emergencies can flare up at any time, Deoliveira said, and emergency managers are tasked with using all resources to provide the garrison commander the information needed to make decisions.

"We provide a common operating picture so that at a glance, he knows what's happening," he said.

Another element is to provide a message to the Public Affairs Officer for distribution to other media and the public and to use all mass notification elements to inform the public.

Deoliveira said that in the event the EOC is activated for a weather-related emergency during the work day, managers would work closely with DES and DPW with input from the ATC meteorologists.

"DES would identify safety concerns and DPW would identify any hazards. The meteorologists tell us what conditions are and what can be expected."

Of primary importance during any emergency situation on APG – weather related or not – employees, service members, Family members or guests should heed all warnings and follow instructions from emergency managers and DES personnel.

In the event of a weather emergency during the duty day, APG emergency managers interact and exchange information with county, state and federal authorities to ensure the safety of the APG community. Weather emergencies can happen at any time. August and September are the height of hurricane season and APG (along with Joppa, Edgewood, Perryman, and Havre de Grace) sits in a storm surge prone area.

Make a plan

Your family may not be together when disaster strikes, so it is important to plan in advance how you will contact one another, how you will get back together, and what you will do in different situations. You will be better prepared to safely reunite your family and loved ones during an emergency if you think ahead and communicate with others in advance.

Family Emergency Plan

Identify an out-of town contact. Be sure every member of your family knows the phone number and has a cell phone, coins, or a prepaid phone card to call the emergency contact.

Teach family members how to use text messaging

Subscribe to alert services for instant text alerts or e-mails alerting you to bad weather, road closings, local emergencies, etc.

Inquire about emergency plans at places where your family spends time: work, daycare and school.

Be informed

Some of the things you can do to prepare for the unexpected, such as making an emergency supply kit and developing a family communications plan, are the same for both a natural or man-made emergency.

However, there are important differences among potential emergencies that will impact the decisions you make and the actions you take. Learn more about the potential emergencies that could happen where you live and the appropriate way to respond to them.

In addition, learn about the emergency plans that have been established in your area by your state and local government.

Emergency preparedness is for all Americans because everyone can be touched by man-made as well as natural disasters. Knowing what to do during an emergency is an important part of being prepared and may make all the difference when seconds count.

Multiscale modeling research seeks atom-to-application understanding of materials

By JOYCE P. BRAYBOY
Army Research Lab

At the U.S. Army Research Laboratory scientists and engineers have been studying how they can make higher performance materials for Soldiers at lighter weights.

Army researchers want to enhance Soldiers' battlefield effectiveness without placing an extra load on their backs.

The challenge has led to the U.S. Army Research Laboratory, or ARL, Enterprise for Multiscale Research of Materials, made up of in-house research and most recently, two cooperative agreements awarded in April. Researchers will develop materials to protect Soldiers in extreme dynamic environments; and create energy efficient devices and batteries.

Johns Hopkins University will lead the materials in extreme environments collaboration. The research lab has invested up to $90 million over 10 years for a five-year initial study that could be renewed for an additional five years. Among the major partner institutions are the California Institute of Technology (Caltech), the University of Delaware and Rutgers University.

The University of Utah will head ARL's multiscale modeling research. The research lab has awarded up to $20.9 million toward the lighter-weight materials program.

A number of institutions will work towards multiscale modeling: Boston University, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Pennsylvania State University, Harvard University, Brown University, the University of California (Davis), and the Polytechnic University of Turin, Italy.

The goal is to bring together experts from government, academia and industry to overcome daunting obstacles to develop new materials.

"It's a big deal," said John Beatty, the Materials in Extreme Dynamic Environments collaborative alliance manager, who is part of the Weapons and Materials Research Directorate, ARL. "We will make significant advances in designing materials, but our focus with this enterprise is as much about changing the way people think about designing as it is anything else."

Right now ARL researchers have some understanding of the mechanical properties of materials and some understanding of the electronic properties, but over time we want to blend the knowledge, said John Pellegrino, acting director of ARL, who was formerly the director of the Computational and Information Sciences Directorate, overseeing the Enterprise for Multiscale Materials Research.

"It is very ambitious to say we will be able to come up with a set of models that can fully describe materials' behavior," Pellegrino said. "But we are hopeful we will be able to model materials well enough that we can begin to design materials using the models, and predict how they will behave. This would give us insight into a whole new class of material capabilities."

In conjunction with ARL, the consortium will lead to a more comprehensive study of materials in the future even though each one is technically independent of the other, Pellegrino said.

The extreme dynamic environments study will be based from the Hopkins Extreme Materials Institute, or HEMI, at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, which has been years in the making.

The institute will focus on the behavior of materials and systems under extreme conditions, said K.T. Ramesh, the Alonzo G. Decker, Jr. professor of Science and Engineering at Johns Hopkins University, founding director of HEMI and a professor of mechanical engineering.

"We are interested in impact and such extreme events from a very broad perspective - including high pressure and high-strain rates," Ramesh explained.

The science is fundamentally close enough to address a range of related problems, like homeland security, asteroid impact and nuclear threats.

"What affects the material is the huge amount of energy landing all at once," Ramesh said. "You can't develop a new protective material until you can understand what happens to it in extreme environments."

Ramesh wants the joint university-ARL team to both understand fundamental mechanisms and be able to articulate the findings to anyone coming on board.

"That is one of the measures of success," he said.

Each of the partner institutions involved in the extreme dynamic environments research brings a unique perspective that combines for a multidisciplinary approach to solving the problem.

For instance, Caltech will use a range of tools they have developed over 20 years to accurately model the behavior of materials from the subatomic level all the way to the scale of bulk materials.

"Right now we don't have a predictive model for designing advanced materials," said Kaushik Bhattacharya, Caltech's lead and the Howell N. Tyson Sr., Professor of Mechanics and professor of materials science. "We have some theories that guide us, but they really are not fully predictive."

Scientists have to understand the complete hierarchy of the advanced materials and how all of the pieces fit together, then how the levels of hierarchy change during a high-velocity impact, Bhattacharya said.

"We hope to increase the speed of development as well as the strength of materials through such rigorous analysis," he said.

The undertaking may seem huge considering the time frame for incorporating new classes of materials into applications now can take as much as 20 years from initial research to first use.

There are many risks associated with finding a material that serves the function you need. One major challenge is even if you succeed, it often doesn't diminish the cost of similar research going forward, said Pellegrino.

"Another challenge is that the complexity of materials has grown," explained Pellegrino. "Edisonian-approach research has given us spectacular results in the past. We have gotten better armor than before, different electron devices, including batteries, than we have ever had. All of that is great, but what we need now is far more complex than we have ever needed."

Soldiers are carrying up to 32 pounds of batteries to power their technological devices in the field these days.

This is one of the concerns that the University of Utah-led consortium will address.

"We want to help the Army make advances in fundamental research that will lead to better materials to help our Soldiers in the field," says computing Professor Martin Berzins, principal investigator from the University of Utah.

Besides batteries, partners, such as Boston University, along with others, will look closely at developing new approaches for designing smaller and more efficient electromagnetic devices that meet military needs.

The design simulation research is based on a five-year plan that could be extended for an additional five years if it is successful.

"What we are looking for is a materials-by-design capability that is done by validated modeling from the smallest to the largest relevant scale," said Meredith Reed, collaborative alliance manager for the consortium, and member of the Sensors and Electron Devices Directorate at ARL. "We want better control and prediction of transport phenomena in order to get the desired properties to develop new Army technologies."

The focus of the program is well-aligned with the White House Materials Genomes Initiative, or MGI, that has been underway for about a year to drastically increase advanced materials design, Reed said.

A White House blog posted May 14 mentioned that achieving the MGI vision demands an "all hands on deck" approach, with dedicated involvement from academic institutions, industry, professional societies, as well as government.

"The MGI white paper talks about creating an ecosystem where manufacturing and development come together and are more streamlined so that discoveries might not have to take 20 years to make it to market," Pellegrino said. "Having that ecosystem increases the chance of collaboration not only in military-specific problems, but the scientific understanding of advanced materials design will grow that much faster across the board."

MRICD GEMS program focuses on the technologies of chem-bio defense

By CINDY KRONMAN
USAMRICD

Once again this summer, the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute of Chemical Defense opened its labs and administrative space to host elementary and middle school students participating in the Army Educational Outreach Program (AEOP) GEMS, or Gains in the Education of Mathematics and Science.

Building on last summer's accomplishments and evaluating what worked well and didn't work in their first year, MRICD GEM's coordinator, Christina Weber, and resource teacher, Linda McDonough, created two fun-filled weeks packed with activities that the participants really enjoyed.

"The GEMS program was some of the coolest stuff I've seen and experienced in my life," said Bel Air sixth grader Sahil Menon in his group's final day slide presentation.

Steven Willats, a Fallston seventh grader, and a second year GEMS participant, found GEMS to be "an awesome program that everyone can have fun in," and Lauren Amodoi, a Joppa sixth grader, "liked all the labs."

"I learned a lot of new things that were interesting," continued Amodoi. "I enjoyed my time at GEMS!"

A goal this year for Weber and McDonough was to plan activities and experiments that related to MRICD's mission of developing medical countermeasures to chemical weapons and neurotoxins, specifically "to create a curriculum to revolve around the latest scientific methods in the chem-bio arena." Additionally, says Weber, they grouped the participants by grade, welcoming "beginning GEMS," students in the fifth and sixth grades the first week, 9-13 July, and "intermediate GEMS," seventh and eighth graders, the second week, 16-20 July.

"The intention is to bring kids in at 5th grade and continue to promote them up the ladder year after year," explains Weber. "The hope is that they eventually 'graduate' to the Science and Engineering Apprentice Program for high school students, and then to the College Qualified Leaders program. Both programs are currently active at MRICD, and we hope to have a steady stream of students in the AEOP system that will one day generate a pool of qualified applicants for civilian jobs."

Twenty-two students participated in the program each week. Two students in week one had participated last year, whereas eight from week two were returning participants.

In this year's labs, the week-one GEMS students learned about extracting DNA from a strawberry and then from their own cheek cells. They colored, labeled and assembled a paper model of the brain, before dissecting and identifying parts of a sheep's brain. They were taught the principles of DNA fingerprinting and the use of restriction enzymes to identify DNA from crime scenes and suspects.

The DNA lab gave students the opportunity to learn the techniques of micropipetting, gel electrophoresis, and gel analysis. Other labs focused on chromatography and the structure of proteins, as well as on light microscopy, which was used with yogurt cultures to demonstrate the presence of microorganisms and the principles of disease identification.

“The intention is to bring kids in at fifth grade and continue to promote them up the ladder year after year. We hope to have a stream of students in the AEOP system that will generate a pool of qualified applicants for jobs.”

Seeing what her DNA looked like was a highlight for Havre de Grace fifth grader Tynia Scott, while fellow Havre de Grace fifth grader Darran Byrd preferred the chromatography lab, "because we got to split up the Hemoglobin and B12."

"My favorite lab was the microorganisms lab," said Casey Moore, a Havre de Grace sixth grader, "because I got to look at a bunch of different living organisms found in yogurt and got to look at E. coli."

During week two, the older GEMS students analyzed proteins using Bradford reagent and spectrophotometry and learned to navigate through DNA sequences on the National Center for Biotechnology Information website in a lab on bioinformatics. Additionally, in the pGlo bacterial transformation lab they learned techniques of sterile methods, micropipetting, streak plating and incubation techniques while transforming a non-disease-causing strain of E. coli with a plasmid that contained the gene GFP (green fluorescent protein) from jellyfish, which made the E. coli glow green under ultraviolet light. Using the techniques of polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and gel electrophoresis, students compared the DNA of plants that had been genetically modified with that of plants that had not been unmodified.

The brain anatomy lab was also a part of the lab rotations for the older students, and its sheep brain dissection was selected by Kyle Shannon, Abingdon sixth grader, as his favorite experience for his group's final presentation. Edgewood seventh grader Paige Towne "enjoyed doing BIO-INFORMATICS!"

In addition to the labs, the students received a demonstration of electron microscopy from MRICD microscopist Tracey Hamilton and of three-dimensional computer modeling by Richard Sweeney. Members of the institute's Chemical Casualty Care Division, Laughton Rimpel, Angela Barrow and Staff Sgt. Gary Hall, showed off a training mannequin, which is specially designed to exhibit several symptoms of nerve agent exposure, such as miosis, forehead sweating, lung sounds, oral cyanosis, heart rate changes and muscle twitching, and is used in the division's instructional courses to medical professionals and first responders.

"My favorite part of GEMS was looking at the mannequin because I got to stick it with a fake needle," said Samantha Stafford, an elementary school student from Aberdeen. Dione Alston, from Bel Air, appreciated the mannequin's ability to "sweat, cry, and bleed." Josh Aarsen, on the other hand, preferred the 3-D modeling.

"It looked complicated," said Aarsen, an Edgewood fifth grader. "I liked the 3-D hemoglobin because it looked like a lava rock."

Again this year, the near peers, who mentor the GEMS students through their labs, activities and final presentations, were from the Science and Mathematics Academy (SMA) at Aberdeen High School, where McDonough is a teacher. Of the ten near peers, five had participated in the MRICD program last year.

"I feel very fortunate to be able to have students of that caliber helping to teach our GEMS participants for the second year in a row," said Weber. "I'm thrilled to maintain a strong relationship with the school."

New to the program this year was Jennifer Hamrick, a science teacher at Havre de Grace Middle School. Hamrick was hired to be the assistant resource teacher. In addition to observing the program, she helped to conduct the lab experiments.

Weber is already looking ahead to next summer and has been working with GEMS coordinators at the Army Research Laboratory at APG North to create an APG-wide GEMS initiative. The result, says Weber, will be one main application system, which she hopes will result in both sites being able to accept as many students as possible.

Given the success of this year's program, it's something the students can look forward to as well.

Roland Park seventh grader Jordan Jenkins not only found her experience to be "fun and educational," but added "I would like to come back next year!"

"The labs were very interesting and fun," concurred another student from Baltimore, seventh grader Zachary Clark. "I would definitely recommend [GEMS] to others."

SCat Gun System saves money, hastens development

By ERIC KOWAL
RDECOM

Why would the U.S. Army want to fire a 155 mm projectile into 540 feet of steel catch tubes and then recover the projectile at the other end?

The answer is actually quite simple: It saves time, money and helps to develop better products.

First, the forces the projectile experiences from being fired from a cannon tube can be recorded using on-board recorders, which help engineers design robust and reliable precision munition systems and components.

That information is then transferred to a computer, analyzed and provides valuable feedback to engineers and Warfighters to help in the future development of weapons and munitions systems.

Second, the SCat Gun System saves money. Engineers can either catch the round and easily recover it within minutes at Picatinny Arsenal, N.J. or traipse through the desert in Arizona looking for the round they just fired.

Without the Soft Recovery System facility and the Soft Catch Gun capability, the costs associated with weaponizing advanced technology increase to the point where programs are managed at high risk to fit within allocated budgets.

The SCat facility is owned and operated by the U.S. Army Armament Research, Development and Engineering Center (ARDEC) and dovetails with the organization's mission.

Development programs such as the Excalibur precision ammunition and Precision Guidance Kits can use such a system for ongoing development, thus reducing development cycle time and cost.

"This is here to soft-catch projectiles so that we can tear them apart after we have fired them to determine what has or has not survived," said Robert Marchak, a mechanical engineer in the Fuze Division of the Munitions Engineering Technology Center.

"We are trying to increase the reliability of smart munitions when we give them to the Soldier," he said.

The system is comprised of a 155 mm Howitzer weapon with a M199 gun tube and 540 feet of catch tubes.

This is a hybrid system that uses both pressurized air and water to help slow down the projectile's momentum. It is the only system of its kind in the world.

The first part of the chain of catch tubes only contains atmospheric air. The next section, 320 feet of the tubes, contains pressurized air, followed by an 80-foot section filled with water.

An overhead view of a projectile firing using the soft catch recovery system, which helps reduce the weapons development cycle.

A small burst diaphragm seals one end of the pressurized air and a piston seals the other end.

The piston also separates the water and pressurized air sections. The burst diaphragm and piston are replaced after each test fire.

Once fired, the projectile achieves free flight for approximately 6 feet and travels down the catch tubes, generating shockwaves that interact with the atmospheric air section, the burst diaphragm, the pressurized air section, the piston and the water section.

In a little over one second, the projectile shockwaves break the burst diaphragm. The air section is compressed and pushed forward, shock and pressure shear the piston moving it against the water (momentum transfer), all while slowing the projectile to a stop.

The piston is ejected out of the end of the system, followed by the air and water, and finally the projectile comes to rest in a mechanized brake system.

On-board recorders inside the projectile measure the accelerations of the projectile from the gun-launch and the catch events.

With a muzzle velocity of 888 meters per second, the entire test takes a little over one second from the time the projectile is fired until it has completely stopped.

The speed of 888 meters per second is equal to 1,986 miles per hour. If a commuter plane could travel at that speed, passengers could fly from Picatinny Arsenal to Albuquerque, N.M., in one hour.

The catch tubes are made of the same steel used to manufacture the 155 mm gun tube.

What makes this system attractive is the tight fit achieved just over the projectile bourlette diameter. This helps keep the projectile straight and makes for a smooth ride.

In addition, the system was designed to quickly remove and replace broken parts. Having the capability to quickly turn the system around after part failures is critical in maintaining an ongoing testing capability, which in turn helps weapons programs stay on schedule.

Since the system is entirely made of metal, temperature fluctuations cause the system to expand with heat and contract when cold.

The system was designed to remain straight, yet have the ability to move in the axial direction during these temperature changes, otherwise, if completely fixed, the stresses caused by contractions or expansions could break bolts or other critical parts on the system.

"This whole system during the winter-to-summer months can grow or shrink about two inches on any given day," Marchak said.

The speed and or velocity of the projectile can be controlled by the energetic operator using a pre-determined amount of propellant, but in doing so, the amount of pressurized air and mass of water needs to be accounted for as well.

"This whole system is more or less based on the velocity of the projectile. The faster the projectile flies, the more pressurized air and water mass you need to try and slow it down," Marchak said.

Marchak said that in order to determine the amount of air pressure and water mass used in the system, many variables need to be considered, including the outside temperature, since the density of the pressurized air changes with temperature.

"We also have a lot of instrumentation, pressure gauges, accelerometers, temperature sensors, proximity sensors," Marchak added. "We are trying to measure and characterize how the projectile and the shockwave that comes off the projectile travels down the tube."

The data is dumped into an electronics data conox box alongside the catch system, then transferred to the safety bunker where a team of engineers save, process, and evaluate the information.

Some of the items tested in the SCat gun include electronic safe and arm devices, GPS electronics boards, infrared cameras, control actuation systems, guidance and navigation units, and many more mechanical and electrical components.

Current customers include the U.S. Army, Excalibur, Honeywell, Lockheed Martin, Rockwell Collins, BAE, and Goodrich.

The Goodrich use of the SCat Gun System has been increasing, with the team achieving a milestone of its 500th shot on May 22, 2012.

A typical test day includes four to five test shots at an average cost of $28,000, which Marchak describes as a small price for helping Warfighters in the pursuit of battlefield dominance.

The first round fired from the 155 mm SCat Gun System came in April 2007. Now, with 559 shots completed to date, Marchak said the system is becoming the standard for precision munitions testing.

Recreation night and special trips just for teens

APG teens now have a place to dance, play ping pong, video games, pool or foosball, watch movies, shoot hoops and meet new friends.

Every Friday night the APG North (Aberdeen) youth center is open to all eligible Child, Youth and School Services high school teens from 9 p.m. to midnight for free open recreation nights. Eligible CYSS teens can also invite up to two friends who are not CYSS affiliated. Beginning in September, the youth center will also be open for open recreation night on Saturdays.

The program, which started in May, averages about 20 teens per night. Kirby Kelbaugh, a Child, Youth and School Services employee and acting teen advisor, said that the program has gained momentum through positive word-of-mouth.

"Every night is kind of different, each week I see new faces," Kelbaugh said.

Kelbaugh added that teens are encouraged to give the counselors feedback on what they want to do at the youth center.

"This program is owned by the teens," he said. "The coun-sultors have worked to get to know them as people, encourage them to get out of their shells.

This program gives them the freedom to express themselves."

I think open rec night is cool, you get to meet new people and it gives you a chance to play sports, be active," said Bart Ngenoh, 17, who regularly attends with friends.

Kelbaugh added that the program will also host trips to local attractions for a small fee to cover travel costs. This fall, a group of teens will go to the Maryland Renaissance Festival.

Teens are also welcome at the APG North youth center from 6 to 9 p.m. on Friday nights and Saturday nights beginning in September; when the center is open to eligible CYSS middle schoolers.

For more information about teen recreation night and upcoming trips, call the APG North youth center at 410-278-9061/4995 or e-mail michael.k.kelbaugh@us.army.mil. Registration is not required for open recreation night; however, registration at CYSS Central Registration, in building 2503, is required for all trips. For more information about CYSS Central Registration, visit http://www.apgmwr.com/family/youth_outreach.html. For more information on all upcoming MWR activities visit <http://www.apgmwr.com/>.

Post Exchange offers more new choices ians who work and live on Aberdeen Proving Ground can also shop the Main Exchange by showing proof of residency and their Common Access Card at the register.

Personnel with temporary duty orders assigning them to Aberdeen Proving Ground are granted limited shopping privileges.

Everyone can use the food facilities, like UFood Grill, and purchase other convenience food items at the Main Exchange. For detailed information about Main Exchange privileges, visit www.shopmyexchange.com, click on Exchange Stores, then Authorized Patrons.

Main Exchange Manager Debbie Armendariz said feedback is critical to the store's success.

"Customer feedback is very important," she said. "If we don't have what customers need, they go outside the gate."

For instance, as a result of customers requests, the Main Exchange now offers brand names like Michael Kors, Tommy Hilfiger, Hearts of Palm, Chaus and more. Also by request, the Main Exchange offers more dress attire, and plan to offer men's suits in the fall.

Armendariz encourages customers to provide feedback by talking to her in the store, calling 410-272-6828, or e-mailing armendariz@aafes.com. APG's Main Exchange is located in Bldg. 2401 on Aberdeen Boulevard, off of Chesapeake and Raritan. Hours are Monday to Friday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Main Exchange provides a dividend to Morale, Welfare and Recreation Services to help support troop quality of life. Roughly two-thirds of Main Exchange earnings are paid to MWR Services programs annually. Last year, the APG AAFES provided $258,688 to local MWR programs.

icated to the service of the war effort; one team, one mission," he said. Addressing Graham, he added, "I know that leading this team will be a great challenge but I know you're up to it."

Graham thanked Dellarocco, who he said called him in Kuwait months ago, and said he looks forward to serving under his command, and Holt, whom he's known for just six months.

"After hearing the accolades and accomplishments of the past few years I'm filled with admiration for Col. Holt, and I feel like he's my friend," he said.

Addressing the ATEC-ATC family, Graham said he was very impressed with what he's observed over the past two weeks.

"It's my priority to get to know each other and then move forward," he said. "I look forward to serving with all of you."

Sgt. 1st Class Benjamin Felan led the ATEC color guard and Sgt. 1st Class William Benjamin, ATEC chaplain assistant, offered the invocation. Sgt. 1st Class Jessie Lopez participated in the passing of the guidon with Holt, Dellarocco and Gordon.

Col. Gordon Graham

Col. Gordon Graham received his commission and a bachelor's degree in Psychology from the Reserve Officer Training Corps at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington in June 1988 where he was the Distinguished Military Graduate. He also holds masters degrees in General Administration from Central Michigan University and in Procurement and Acquisition Management from Webster University.

His past assignments include Fort Clayton, Panama during Operation Just Cause; Fort Bliss, Texas; Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.; Fort Jackson, S.C.; Fort Lee, Va.; and Saudi Arabia during Operations Desert Shield/Storm. Graham comes to APG after serving in Kuwait as the director of forward Operations - Kuwait, for the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Acquisition, Logistics and Technology).

Graham's military awards include the Bronze Star, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal; the Army Meritorious Service Medal; the Army Commendation and Achievement medals; the Army Basic Airborne and EOD badges and the Office of the Secretary of Defense Staff Badge.

Graham and his wife have one daughter.

and APG Garrison Commander Col. Gregory McClinton.

"What makes this very special is that here at APG UFood Grill is the first on a military installation," Bright said.

Cocotas commented that this fall, UFood Grill will open in two other locations, in building 6010 in the C4ISR campus and in the ATEC Headquarters, building 2202.

"I give you our pledge that we will deliver to the APG community the highest quality service, and top quality, healthy food," Cocotas said.

McClinton thanked attendees and asked them to show their support by generating sales and providing feedback to UFood Grill management and the APG command team.

"We will not be successful if you do not support the changes on the installation," McClinton said. "The bottom line is you will make UFood Grill successful here at Aberdeen Proving Ground."

APG Garrison Commander Col. Gregory McClinton; and Vice President of Eastern Region AAFES Maurice Joiner.

Afterwards, customers were treated to free samples of baked unfries and frozen yogurt. During the event, a mobile van selling UFood Grill items was also available.

Customer Valarie Jefferson, an ATEC employee, said that she was excited to see UFood Grill come to APG.

"This has been a long time coming," she said. "I want to get away from traditional fast food and eat healthier, set a better example."

Sgt. 1st Class George Cummings from the 20th Support Command said that he was glad to see new healthy food options at APG.

"I have been patiently waiting for the opening of UFood Grill," Cummings said. "I hope people support it."

Lisa White, a PEO C3T employee, said that UFood Grill promotes a healthy lifestyle.

"The Army promotes a healthy lifestyle, this restaurant is in line with the mission," White said.

UFood Grill hours of operation are Monday-Friday 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday-Sunday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Breakfast items are sold throughout the day. For more information about UFood Grill, visit www.ufoodgrill.com/.

career. Adams encouraged the audience to put their trust in God during difficult times.

"Happiness is your choice, let's rejoice," Adams sang, as the crowd cheered and lifted their hands in praise.

Before Adams took the stage, local singers, musicians and dancers performed several powerful musical numbers, like "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory," "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," and "Soon I Will Be Done." WBALTV's Education Reporter Dr. Tim Tooten, Sr., served as Master of Ceremonies. Guests included APG and CECOM commander Maj. Gen. Robert Ferrell; CECOM Command Sgt. Maj. Kennis Dent; Garrison Commander Col. Gregory McClinton and their wives and Garrison Command Sgt. Maj. James Ervin.

Attendees said that they felt encouraged from the music and the moving words.

"Yolanda Adams has been an inspiration to me for years," said attendee Chala Brooks, wife of Cedric Brooks, who works for the U.S. Army Research Laboratory. "I know all her songs."

"I loved the concert because it had a mixture of local and professional talent. It was a concert for the people, by the people."

Canara Price
Producer and performer

"I loved the concert because it had a mixture of local and professional talent," said Canara Price, a producer and performer from New York. "It was a concert for the people, by the people."

"I hope they bring more gospel concerts to APG," said Anthony Hutt who attended the concert with members of the Restoration Tabernacle in Cecil County. "It was very inspirational."

Local Talent

Local talent included the Baltimore City College Choir from Baltimore; Haley Taylor and Maya Taylor from Joppa; Lea Gilmore from Baltimore; Apostle from the Oak Grove Baptist Church in Bel Air; Dancers of Inspiration from St. Johns Baptist Church in Columbia; and Ames Musical Project from Ames United Methodist Church.
